"And it is the Cakka-vatti Buddha circle of ideas in the one case, just as the Messiah Logos in the other, that has had the principal influence in determining the opinions of the early disciples as to the person of their master." So "Buddhism may be found as useful for the true appreciation of early Christianity as the Vedas are useful for the true appreciation of classical mythology."

It is the inculcation of such principles for use in the study of Religion in general that makes this book most valuable; and it will be esteemed by the student as a discipline, even more than as a store of information. J. BURNS-GIBSON, M. A.
